STARFISH STORY – A STORY OF STUDENT IMPACT

BY MEAGHAN SCHNEIDER

In the year of COVID there are plenty of trials and tribulations that the students face. The one particular student that I have in mind is a student that I have worked closely with since last year. This student doesn't give up easy. But when their math class started getting more difficult, I really witnessed them starting to waiver in their confidence in math. After explaining that Geometry was like Algebra but with shapes and looking back on their fundamental Algebra skills, I could finally see that shining student regain their confidence again. I am proud to see how far my starfish student has come and look forward to what lies ahead.
