STARFISH STORY - A STORY OF STUDENT IMPACT

BY GLORI RIVERA

*Nancy started the year with poor grades and was constantly missing school. It wasn't until after quarter one that Nancy started to take responsibility for her education. I asked her about her grades and aspirations after high school. She told me she wasn't doing so great and wanted to change that because one of her goals was to attend college. I asked her how I could help her teach her goals and she asked me to consistently check in with her. Nancy and I have a 10-15-minute check-in about her goals every week and what needs to be done. She started attending tutoring with me a few times a week to catch up on her work. I am proud to share that Nancy has improved her grades from a D-F to B-C average. She actively participates in class and is always trying to improve her grades. I couldn't be prouder of my little nugget can't wait to see where she is by the end of the year. =Student Pseudonym
